What is Low fog?

Low fog is also sometimes referred to as the 'Dancing on the clouds' effect. It's an effect in which a thick, white, low-lying fog is quickly thrown out onto the dancefloor area which covers the floor and lingers, giving the impression that you are indeed dancing on a thick cloud. What makes this effect so unique is its ability to hug the floor, as opposed to smoke or haze which will fill the air. Because the effect comprises of basically CO₂ and water, as well as it being heavier than air, it will stick to the ground and will dissipate at around waist height. This effect does not cause any immediate danger to people and will not trigger fire alarms, so is safe to use in any venue. Those with respiratory conditions should consult their doctor regarding advice on suitability for them.

The machine we use to achieve our low fog effect is a sophisticated, premium (and expensive!) machine that pumps out low fog at an impressive, yet even and consistent rate, so you won't have to worry about your effect falling short of expectations. Although expensive, this effect is guaranteed to leave a lasting impression on you and your guests, with incredible photos to match.

So, what do you get with this service?

You'll get around 5 minutes of runtime from our machines, plus another couple of minutes before the fog disperses in the air, which is perfect to last through most first dances, cake cuttings or entrances. Of course, there is no restriction on how you can use this effect and being creative with other services is what will make your event so unique and desirable. A couple of examples could be our confetti shower service; you can have low fog out for your first dance, and have a confetti shot or 2, so the confetti falls around you and disappears into the mist, picture that! Another idea for a party scenario is to combine some UV lighting and have an atmospheric glowing fog that surrounds dancers.
